The image is a high-contrast, black and white photograph. It depicts a dense, textured surface that appears to be a wall or a large number of small, light-colored objects (possibly seeds or grains) packed closely together. The texture is granular and uneven. At the bottom of the image, there is a dark, irregular border that looks like a shadow or a different material. The overall effect is one of a close-up, high-magnification view of a rough or organic surface.

Figure 1 consists of four micrographs arranged in a 2x2 grid. The top row shows the surface after 10 days, and the bottom row shows the surface after 20 days. The left column is for the control (no water), and the right column is for the water addition treatment. The control surfaces show no growth, while the water addition surfaces show extensive hyphal growth and spore formation.
